Some chinese restaurants in UK seem to use a mass production approach. The chef at the China Garden in Brighton in contrast is an artist and clearly must love his job. We had fish soup to start with. Delicious and subtle in flavour with just enough ingredients. This was followed by lettuce wraps whose filling and sauce were exemplary. We finished off with half a duck with the usual onion, cucumber and pancake accompani... read more.

What User doesn't like about China Garden:

the place is good. the personal is super fast profes. the menu is all set in English taste and desire and they find every piece east with chicken claw and duck toungue dim summen. I'm sorry, but for some reason, I didn't taste it. the crushed chicken noodles I ordered seemed to be so dried (to save on oil). asked for salt and black pepper. they had not been able to improve the taste. evaluation because it was okay ov...
