What Rosie Wood likes about Wild Caper: Not long ago I posted about my first experience of Brixton market at Seven. A few units down you'll find Wild Caper, an ostensibly popular choice judging by the packed tables and queues outside. But you can avoid the crowds by choosing a slightly more serene time of day, perhaps an hour or two before Brixton shakes off its hangover, so grab a couple of your favourite brunch partners and head here for good coffee and... What George Phillips doesn't like about Wild Caper: we were greeted in this cafe and sitting immediately! the menu is simple, but sound nice! the coffee was beautiful, which is a real compliment, because it is hard to find a beautiful coffee everywhere in London! I ordered mozzarella, basilikum and tomato on sourdough toast. first it was perhaps sour, but was cut very thin, and only one piece. And then it was dressed with cold tomato socks and cold mozzarella. on the... read more. With the extensive range of coffee and tea specialties, a visit to Wild Caper becomes even more attractive, Naturally, you should also taste the tasty burgers, accompanied by sides like fries, salads, or wedges served. If you want to have breakfast, a tasty brunch awaits you, Additionally, well digestible Mediterranean menus are available.
