If the weather conditions are right, you can also eat outside. What Janet P doesn't like about The Full Moon:

The food was not great, and it was so cold that I ate wrapped up in a scarf. It took a long, long time to thaw out when we returned home. The waiter told us the owner had decreed there was to be no heating until November by then most of the diners could have died from exposure. The crayfish and prawn starter was OK, and the pork and bakewell tart were acceptable. The salmon had not been deboned properly, and it was n... read more.
