Nestled by the river, Riverside Restaurant boasts stunning views but faces scrutiny over service and food quality. While some diners appreciate the recent renovations and diverse menu options, including well-regarded lava stone steaks, others criticize the cleanliness and staff professionalism. Reports of flat drinks and greasy fish and chips dampen the experience, and the ambience suffers from flickering lights. Enthusiastic service counters some grievances, yet numerous guests express disappointment at the handling of customer feedback and the perceived decline since a change in ownership. Overall, a blend of positive experiences and significant areas for improvement marks the restaurant's current landscape.
