Nestled in Melrose, this restaurant offers a mix of experiences for diners, ranging from cozy charm to inconsistent food quality. While some guests appreciate the welcoming staff and generously portioned, homemade dishes—such as the celebrated Balmoral chicken and comforting Angus beef burgers—others lament the restaurant's dated decor and lackluster meal preparation. Breakfast seems to be a particular low point, with reports of overcooked items. Nonetheless, many families enjoy the inviting atmosphere, especially with a dedicated children's menu. Overall, the restaurant holds promise, but prospective diners are urged to temper expectations about the culinary experience.
