Located in the charming village of Little Stretton just 12 miles south of Shrewsbury, The Ragleth Inn is a traditional English Country Inn dating back to 1663. Nestled quarter of a mile off the A49, the inn boasts beautiful countryside views, with the Ragleth Hill to one side and the Longmynd to the other. The pub gardens, spanning half an acre, are adorned with lush shrubs and trees, providing a serene setting for up to 70 guests to enjoy. The two lounges can accommodate 40 guests, while the separate dining room overlooks the garden and seats 30. After a complete renovation in June 2005, new owners have transformed the interior, exposing the old brick walls and restoring the original beams. The addition of a new log burner ensures a warm and inviting atmosphere at The Ragleth Inn.
