At the Edinburgh Castle restaurant, experiences vary widely, highlighting both promise and disappointment. While the setting captivates, service struggles have marred visits, with instances of unwelcoming attitudes and inattentiveness noted by guests. Despite these setbacks, many diners appreciate the quality of food choices, especially the afternoon tea, which includes a diverse selection of teas and decent pastries. However, gluten-free and vegetarian options could be more thoughtfully curated. Although the atmosphere offers a chance to relax and enjoy scenic views, inconsistencies in service and food quality leave some visitors longing for a more seamless experience. Overall, it's a mixed bag for what should be a special occasion.
