Beijing Diner presents a mixed bag of experiences, with some patrons praising its nostalgic authentic Chinese cuisine, fresh ingredients, and caring service, especially within its family-run atmosphere. Many enjoyed standout dishes like half duck, chow mein, and BBQ ribs, remarking on generous portion sizes and reasonable prices. However, a number of guests reported disappointing meals, citing overcooked and flavorless dishes with inconsistent service, particularly during busy periods. While some diners were pleased enough to recommend a visit, others declared they would not return. The restaurant seems to have potential, but experiences vary widely, warranting caution for future diners.
